COVID-19 Mental Health and Wellbeing

Coronavirus (COVID-19) is having an impact on everyone's daily lives, as the government takes necessary steps to manage the outbreak, reduce transmission and treat those who need medical attention. During this time, you may be bored, frustrated or lonely. You may also feel low, worried, anxious, or be concerned about your health or that of those close to you. These are all common reactions to the difficult situation we face. Everyone reacts differently to events and changes in the way that we think, feel, and behave and this will vary between different people and over time. It's important that you take care of your mind as well as your body. See the links below for practical steps which may help maintain positive mental health and well-being during the pandemic.

APV is not restricted to violence by an adolescent against a parent; it extends to violence against a family member who is acting as a parent i.e. common-law in-laws, foster family, grandparents, aunt or uncle.
